

WILL URGE REPEAL OF 'JOKER' FOUND IN WAR TAX BILL

Hall of Tennessee to Lead
Fight—Clause Clear, Says
Revenue Official.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—(By Associated Press.)—The House of Representatives today passed a bill repealing the "joker" clause in the war tax bill. The bill was introduced by Representative Hall of Tennessee. The clause in the war tax bill provided that any person who failed to pay the war tax on time would be liable for a fine of $100. The bill was passed by a vote of 241 to 159.

Conferees on the War Tax Bill, however, deny that the provision is a "joker." They say the provision was fully explained in both Houses, and that the members knew what they were voting on. Some other members, however, declare the provision was slipped into the bill without general knowledge on part of the members of Congress, and that it does not express the intentions of the legislative body.

At the Internal Revenue Commissioner's office the intent of the clause is held clear. An official of the bureau said:

"We think the clause is very clear, whatever may be said of the wisdom or justice of it. It will be very simple to make regulations to put the law into operation. The point of difficulty, if there be one in the law, is to define just who is liable to the tax as having a trade or professional occupation. It is true, as the criticism commonly heard to-day puts it, that the tax is laid on workers and the draughtsman is not allowed to go soot free. We must also admit, unpleasant as the fact appears, that we know of no good reason from any public point of view why officers of the Government or of the States should be exempted. If we were to venture a guess it would be that the exemption of members of Congress was the thing aimed at, and to accomplish that it was necessary to take in with them all officers of the Government."

"It seems to be clear that the aim was to put a heavy tax on professional men who enjoy large fees, such as instance, as big corporation lawyers. No doubt that this was one of the main considerations in the framing of the amendment. The Internal Revenue has had no time in the pressure of work connected with the vast amount of new taxation legislation to make any analysis of this new tax or its application."

"We did not know how much revenue would be derived by it, and we are not able now to say just how much it would draw the line as to occupations. There is a question as to whether the new tax would apply to salaried men, as distinguished from men in business or in the professions. Inasmuch as Government officers draw salaries and are expressly exempted, it would appear that it is the intent of Congress to put the tax on all men who draw salaries, and that they would be held to be either in trade or professionally occupied."

"Aside from the matter of drawing a few fine distinctions like these I have mentioned, the law seems to be a very clear one whatever may be thought of the burden that it lays on those who are to be taxed. It must be remembered that we are in a war, that the whole country is in it, and that the people generally must bear the burden of it. This new tax is one of the war burdens. The Government is paying for liberty and for the destruction of autocracy."
